Mysteries of the Ozarks

Since I wanted to let people know about the rich heritage of the Ozarks and the way that life was lived, I chose the Ozarks as the topic of my book.

Although I did not grow up in the Ozarks, my heritage did include the "Spook Light", which is the first story in Vol. II.

Voices of our Time: 5 Decades of Studs Terkel Interviews

Studs Terkel is one of my favorite authors. Although he has interviewed many famous people in the course of his broadcasting career, he has also spent a great deal of time recording the lives of ordinary people during extraordinary times. His research methods include the use of oral history - recorded interviews with individuals describing their experiences during specific periods of American History. I selected this book so that library patrons could hear the fascinating stories he has compiled. In his nineties, and a lifetime resident of Chicago, Terkel has been heard often on National Public Radio.

I & Dog
By the Monks of New Skete

I have an eleven year old German Shepherd named Boomer. Dogs have always been an important part of my life, and having a well-trained dog you can take with you everywhere just adds to the joys of having a dog. I've admired the Monks of New Skete and their training programs for some time, so when I found one of their books that the library didn't have, I knew it would be a good addition to the collection.
